During the campaign for the office of 44th President of the United States, the name and qualities of Abraham Lincoln were invoked and associated with Obama on numerous occasions. All this media attention and, coincidentally, the 200th Anniversary of the birth of Lincoln on February 12 of this year, has sparked new interest in the man and his mystique. This has resulted in a recent plethora of photographs, documentaries and books on the man.

Shepherd, Nicholas H., photographer. Abraham Lincoln, Congressman-elect from Illinois. Springfield, Ill., 1846 or 1847, daguerreotype.

“ Lincoln lived in the era when photography was introduced to the world and then became a mass communication tool. Lincoln was the first U.S. presidential candidate to tap the new technology frequently and has been called the most photographed man of his day.

Charles Darwin and Lincoln share this same date of birth and also the cover of the new Smithsonian Magazine and an article titled Lincoln's Contested Legacy. In this issue Philip B. Kunhardt III, co-author of the 2008 book Looking for Lincoln, explores the often conflicting myths associated with this man:

“ Lincoln's legacy has shifted again and again as different groups have interpreted him. Northerners and Southerners, blacks and whites, East Coast elites and prairie Westerners, liberals and conservatives, the religious and secular, scholars and popularizers--all have recalled a sometimes startlingly different Lincoln. He has been lifted up by both sides of the Temperance Movement; invoked for and against federal intervention in the economy; heralded by anti-communists, such as Senator Joseph McCarthy, and by American communists, such as those who joined the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in the fight against the fascist Spanish government in the 1930s....

Though our understanding of him is more nuanced than it once was, and we are more able to recognize his limitations as well as his strengths, Abraham Lincoln remains the great example of democratic leadership--by most criteria, truly our greatest president.
